My eyes gazed in wonder at the marvellous sight. I wanted to soak up all the atmosphere, but I couldn't believe what I was seeing. The magical, glistening sweets hung from the candy trees. Every time I took a step past them they swayed in the breeze, and the glorious scent of them wafted through the air. Excitement was traveling through the room as we galloped over the crunchy grass. "Can we try the sweets?" a voice asked from a far.

"Don't eat too many." Was the reply from Willy Wonka, "I won't be cleaning up your mess!"

How wonderful the treats tasted! We ran from place to place in the room because there was so much to see and try. Suddenly there was a shriek from the impressive chocolate river. Augustus Gloop's hand was now the only visible part of him waving from the brown water.

All of the children's mouths began watering as they stared at the wonderful delicious sweets in front of them. What an exciting day this was! Charlie dashed quickly over to the sticky lollipops, and happily jumped over some gum drops that had fallen. He looked carefully at all the tasty treats as he didn't know what to have. How could he ever decide? He walked past the mint sugar grass chewy gummy bears and candy berries. Finally, he stopped at the delectable candy cane trees and pulled one from the tallest tree.
